

Anjeza Llubani

Arch. Anjeza Llubani is currently lecturer and coordinator at the Department of Architecture, at Marin Barleti University in Tirana. Arch. Anjeza Llubani has been a visiting scholar at the Polytechnic University of Bari, under Erasmus+ program. She has participated and presented at conferences, workshops and open lectures during her academic career. She received both the Undergraduate and Master degree from the University of Venice I.U.A.V. Italy (Laurea in Scienze dell'architettura, Laurea Specialistica in Architettura).

During 2010-2012 she worked as an architect at the Rizzi PRO.TEC.O Architecture-Studio in Venice, mainly working on design architectural adaptation, restore, urban design (e.g. research and design of the city of Cortina's - Italy, drafting the proposals for urban development of the city of Abruzzo, Italy). She has also participated at European Architecture Contest, Dubrovnik 'Crown' Competitions (2011) designing the most important part of the city of Dubrovnik, outside the walls of the city. During her professional career as an architect, she have been working as junior research at the Adriapol Institute, participating in different national and international projects regarding requalification and evaluation of urban planning, heritage and projecting the ecosystems of public spaces and building.